It is no clear how many people volunteered for sport and recreation. The rate of volunteering for sport and recreation was 21% of all volunteers in Australia and 26% according to the 1998 National Survey of Volunteering in the United Kingdom. Tedrick and Henderson (1989) estimated that 21% of all those Americans who volunteered did so in sport and recreation. On the basis of these figures, we can guess that 20% of all volunteers in America were involved in sport and recreation, and that the economic value of these contributions would amount to one-fifth of the total dollars just referred to or slightly over $50 billion. The enormity of this amount is highlighted further when compared to the total worth of the sport industry at $213 billion in 1999.
